Lifelong Learning Programme

Background to change in the Deliverables 18 Pedagogic Guides and 19 Materials for training course

Early piloting suggested that the CHERMUG quantitative and qualitative games were quite self-explanatory and easy to play and training courses as such were not required for the teachers to run the games. In addition the games were going to be played online at home by some players.

Consequently the focus of work package 4: Develop and run teacher training courses changed from developing and running teacher training courses and more effort was invested in developing staff and student support guides which could be used online (Deliverables 18 Pedagogic Guides). Since “materials for training courses” was covered in Deliverable 18, it was felt that Youtube videos would provide a useful complement to the guides by flagging up the game to tutors who might be interested in using the games.

Deliverables 19 Materials for training course

The 4 YouTube videos (Deliverable 19) are targeted at potential users of the CHERMUG games. They provide a general introduction to the games, describe the CHERMUG games, provide an explanation of why tutors might choose to use the games and an account of how to use the games in teaching research methods and statistics. The CHERMUG videos were developed by OUNL. They are available on the CHERMUG website (www.chemug.eu) but can also be downloaded from the following YouTube links:

1. CHERMUG Games Introduction <http://youtu.be/BDc1bUEjHbc>
2. What are CHERMUG games? <http://youtu.be/cB-JS4wntd0>
3. Why CHERMUG games? <http://youtu.be/NntlobanHLk>
4. How to use CHERMUG games <http://youtu.be/GVbO2zqnm0w>

The videos provide a means of encouraging teachers to use the games and the materials were developed for both face-to-face delivery and online delivery. Due to time and resource constraints, the videos are only available in English. They are available on the CHERMUG website (www.chemug.eu)
